Changes in AAA Program For 1940 Are Explained

Blacksburg, Jan. 17.- How recent changes in Federal Farm programs would help Virginia farmers attain greater conservation of the soil, forest, and human resources of the State was explained today by Dr. J. R. Hutcheson, director of the State Agricultural Extension Service.

The changes, announced recently by Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, and about which he wrote President Julian A. Burruss of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute call for more emphasis on conservation, in all land-use programs of the Department of Agriculture and for closest coordination with State efforts along that line.

Of special interest to Virginians are a number of changes in the Agriculture program.

Changes in the rate of credit for soil-building practices under the 1940 AAA Program will emphasize conservation through practices not normally carried out, including greater use of lime and phosphate, and winter cover crops, Director Hutcheson pointed out.

Extension of grant-aid provisions will make lime and phosphate available to farmers on a larger scale in 1940. The cost of materials, including freight charges, will be deducted from conservation payments, making the soil-building materials available to farmers without cash outlay.

Special encouragement will be given to seeding more cover crops in the fall of 1940 that are especially adaptable to Virginia.

Winter legume seed grown under the grant of aid project in the Pacific Northwest will be available for farmers to plant in the fall of 1940.

A new provision of the AAA program allows any farm a special $40 payment for planting trees and many farmers in Virginia are expected to improve their farms by planting more trees and shrubs. Establishment of a $20 minimum pyament which may be earned on any farm through conservation practices other than tree planting and so specified under the program, should further enable small farmers to carry out more soil-building practices.

The Farm Security Administration will hereafter, so encourage crop rotation and soil conservation, make no loans to farmers in its rehabilitation program when the farm plan provides for growing more than one cash crop. Farm Security Administration supervisors will also give increased attention to soil conservation practices in drawing up management plans with borrowers; will help borrowers obtain longer-term, better- written leases; and whenever feasible, will require needy persons receiving Farm Security Administration grants to do conservation work on their farms.

The changes call for Soil Conservation Service technicians to give greater technical soil conservation assistance to Farm Security Administration supervisors. Agricultural Administration committeemen, and the like, to realize its work more rapidly so as to assist a still larger number of farmers through locally organized soil-conservation districts, and to cooperate further with the Extension Service in establishing complete soil conservation demonstration in different areas of the various districts.

DO YOU ROB THE LIVING ROOM

to light the kitchen?

Aha, Mrs. Ward! Caught in the act of robbing your husband's reading lamp of its nice, new 100-watt bulb! Why stoop to this, when you can buy another for only 15¢?

This national pastime of robbing one light socket to fill another is one reason why 2 out of 3 bulbs in homes today are wrong size for easy seeing. Protect eyesight! Check your reading lamps, to make sure each one totals at least 100 to 150 watts...if not, get the right size bulbs today!

Will Advertising Do Me Any Good?

Certainly, madam! Let us answer your question by pointing out some of the things advertising already has done for you and your family.

Advertising has given you new and better food, trade-marked to guarantee quality. It has brought you the pleasure of movies... made your automobile comfortable and safe... and given you labor-saving devices in your home.

Through advertising you have learned where and what to buy to save money. As a result of nation-wide sales, possible only through the power of advertising, great laboratories and factories have been developed... giving you higher quality merchandise while prices have come rapidly lower. Hence, advertising has opened the door to developments which have freed you from kitchen drudgery... saved you from fatigue of long hours of washing, cleaning, baking.

Advertising has a direct effect on your income in two ways: First, you buy more for your money because large-scale manufacturing, possible only when advertising delivers quantity sales, lowers prices down. Second, your income is larger because advertising makes jobs... and when jobs are plentiful all incomes are higher.

To eliminate advertising is to destroy American enterprise and the American Way of Living.
